PS 2609 . A1 1883

THE RAVEN

EDGAR ALLEN POE---1825.

with eighteen additional verses by

S.AMUEL L. RUFFNER---1883.

Morrieton, Arkansas. Copyrighted by SAMUEL L. Ruffner, with all rights reserved

P is before Poe's verses, R before Ruffner's

Once upon a midnight dreary, While I pondered, weak and weary, P

Over many a quaint and curious Volume of forgotten lore

While I nodded, nearly napping, Suddenly there came a iapping, As of some one gently rapping,

As of some one gentry rapping, Rapping at my chamber door.
"Tis some visitor," I muttered,
"Tapping at my chamber door-Only this, and nothing more."

- And yet I felt chagrined and worried
At taps by which my dream was flurried:
Untimely taps my thoughts had hurried
From bright Elysian shore,
"No friend," said I. "could be so rude.
As to thus unseasonably intrude

At midnight's sacred solitude. At initialists sacred solution,
By rapping at my chamber door,
No good friend would thus go tapping.
Tapping at his neighbor's door,
Unless important news he bore."

— "I'm sure," said 1. "'tis not a ghost,
For of such thing I love to boast
My non-belief, as all men do,
When talking of specters hoar.
Such dreadful things my blood ne'er chill.
Pale phantom forms my mind ne'er fill.
Nor moves my pulse to quicker thrill:—
I'm not peryons on that score.—

The notes my pulse to quake to The not nervous on that score,—
The others quake at goblins grim.
I'm solid on that score—
Stanneh and solid to the core,"

R--

Though fear, my words did not betoken. A band of doubts had been awoken. That would not down, but jeered and mocked. My self-assuring "nothing more." With pointed shafts my breast they darted, While from my restful chair 1 started, Two steps or more the chair 1 parted, And stood midway the chamber floor. The wild winds around the gables. Dirges of my dead Hope bore—That said in mournful moarns, "Lenore, Lenore."

Air, distinctly I remember, It was in the bleak December,
 And each separate dying ember

Wrought its ghost upon the floor. Eagerly I wished the morrow;— Vainly I had sought to borrow

From my books surcease of sorrowsorrow for the lost Lenore For that rare and radient maiden om the angels name "Lenore" deless here for evermore.

P. , , 19

+ 1

1 And the silken, sad, uncertain And the stiken, sad, uncertain Rustling of each purple curtain Thrilled me,—filled me with fantastic Terrors, never felt before; So that now, to still the beating Of my heart. I stood repeating.

'Tis some visitor entreating Entrance at my chamber doorSome late visitor entreating Entrance at my chamber door: This it is, and nothing more."

ľ Presently my soul grew stronger; Presently by sour grew stronger: Hesitating then no longer, "Sir." said 1. "or Madam, truly Your forgiveness I implore: But the fact is I was napping, And so gently you came rapping. And so faintly you came tapping. Tapping at my chamber door,
That I scarce was sure I heard you,"Here I opened wide the door;Darkness there, and nothing more.

Deep into that darkness peering. Long I stood there, wondering, fearing. Deadying, dreaming dreams no mortal P Ever dared to dream before; But the silence was unbroken. And the sillness gave no token. This Is whispered, and an echo-Murmured back the word, "Lenore!" Merely this, and nothing more,

Back into the chamber turning.
All my soul within me borning.
Soon again I heard a tapping.
Something londer than before.
"Surely," said I, "surely, that is something at my window lattice;
Let me see then, what thereat is,
And this mystery explore:

Let my heart be still a moment,
And this nystery explore: And this mystery explore; "Tis the wind, and nothing more."

Stepping quickly to the window So that distance might not hinder R Me to hearing to advantage
What was going on out door,—
All ghosts of childish dread 1 cast Ont of my soul, then unabashed I boldly raised the lower sash, Quicker than I'd eer done before. With eager car against the shutter, I listened, as I'd not before, -Naught hearing but the winds sad roar.

Open here I flung the shutter,
When, with many a flirt and flutter,
In there stepped a stately Raven
Of the saintly days of yore;
Not the least obeisance madeshe;
Not a minute stopped or stayed he.
But, with mien of lord or lady.
Perched above my chamber doorPerched upon a bust of Pallas.
Just above my chamber doorPerched, and sat, and nothing more.

Then this ebony bird beguiling My sad fancy into smiling. By the grave and stern decorum My sad fancy into smiling, the grave and stern decorum
Of the countenance he wore,
"Though thy crest be shorn and shaven;
"Thou," I said, "art suce no craven,
Ghastly, grim, and ancient Raven,
Wandering from the nightly shore, fell me what thy lordly name is On the night's Plutonian shore! Quoti the Rayen, "Nevermore."

 Much I marveled this ungainly Fowl to hear discourse so plainly.
 Though its answer little meaning-P _

Little relevancy bore;

For we cannot help agreeing That no living human being Ever yet was blest with seeing Bird above his chamber door

Bird or beast upon the sculptured

Bust above his chamber door, With such name as "Nevermore,"

I may have heard it wrong before,-

Jest not, good sir, nor alias give, As I fear you did before." He gravely answered—"Nevermore,"

"Nevermore, so clear, without confusion Of sound, or ought to cause illusion,"

I said, in measured syllables

Repeated gravely o'er.
"I'm sure none but a merry andrew
Would dub his bird with such a slander.
It seems he had a mind to pander
To things we should ignore.

My feathered friend, there are some things "Tis best we should ignore." Quoth the Rayen, "Nevermore."

"Nevermore." I said, with smile, aside,
"He seems to take a wondrous pride—
That clumsy, whimsic, woeful mane
Of his, in telling o'er and o'er,
If your master were a poet,
Vivor abristantur, dath sadly show it: Your christening doth sadly show it:

If, good sir, you did but know it,
You'd cease to tell it o'er and o'er;
If you but knew it were unbandsome,
You'd cease to tell it o're and o'er,"

Quoth the Raven, "Nevermore,

 "Just there," said 1, "in that connection.
Your 'Nevermore is most perplexing.
And hath a dubious meaning
Unlike it had before. R—

Do you mean by such replying

To give an answer signifying An emphatical denying My conclusions on that score?

Do you mean, that in future, you'll Not heed my counsel on that score?" Quoth the Raven, "Nevermore,"

R—

"People differ in opinion, 'Specially in Taste's dominion: Some love the sad, the odd or rule;

Some love æsthetics bright glamour. If 'nevermore' be no misnomer,

I fear whoever be your owner

I tear whoever be your owner
Is crude in taste, or chronic mourner, in need of cheerful Hope's glamour.
May you and he be happy yet,
And dazed by cheer Hope's glamour."
Quoth the Rayen, "Nevermore.'

"Hope from the box of old Pandora, With face as fair as bright Arora, Is left to us, to cheer in times

Of loss, with promise to restore. Arora, fair daughter of the dawn,

Opens the golden gates of morn:

Hopes plucks from wounded heart the thorn. And heals the bleeding sore;

Pluto before Arora flies; Hope heals the bleeding sore."

Quoth the Raven, "Nevermore,"

11-

"Nevermore," he spoke it well, 13 But in that tone a mournful knell Of departed joys, there seemed, that thrilled The chords about my own heart's core. "Perhaps," said I, "he, too, hath sorrow. And hopes not for a happy morrow. But only seeks my room to borrow. Shelter above mp chamber door.

He cares less for my happiness
Than for that perch above the door,"
Quoth the Raven, "Nevermore."

But the Raven, sitting tonely On the placid bust, spoke only That one word, as if his soul in That one word he did outpour Nothing farther then he uttered, Not a feather then he fluttered, Till I scarcely more than muttered, "Other friends have flown before-On the morrow he will leave me, As my Hopes have flown before," Then the bird said, "Xevermore," ľ Startled at the stillnes broken By reply so aptly spoken, "Doubless," said 1, "what it utters Is its only stock and store, Caught from some unhappy master, Whom unmerciful Disaster Followed fast and followed faster.

Till his songs one burden hore.
Till the dirges of his Hope that Melancholy burden bore, nevermore.' Of Never-

But the Raven still beguiling All my sad soul into smiling, Straight I wheeled a cushioned seat in Front of bird, and bust, and door; Then, upon the velvet sinking, t betook myself to linking Fancy into faney, thinking
What this ominous bird of yore—
What this grim, ungainly, ghastly,
Gaunt, and ominous bird of yore
Meant in croaking "Nevermore."

This I satengaged in guessing, But no syllable expressing 1. To the ford whose tiery eyes now Burned into my bosom's core; Burned into my bosom's core;
This and more I sat divining,
With my head at ease reclining
On the cushion's velvet iming
That the lamp-light gloated o'er,
t whose velvet, violet lining.
With the lamp-ligh gloating o'er
Site shall press, ah, nevermore.

Just then there seemed an apparition— A half defined and spectral vision Within the Raven's ominous shadow, Athwart my chamber floor, With fixed gaze I bendled forward:— It took the form of one I sorrowed ł It took the form of one I sorrowed,—
A loved ones form my soul had sorrowed
Since she had gone to yonder shore,
"Enchantress of my soul," I cried: "Hast thou returned from yonder shore?" Quoth the Rayen, "Nevermore."

But soon that radiant phantom vanished. While from my breast foud Hope was R -While from my banished tlike summer bird, when winter comes. Far flown to happier shore.

Then darker grew the silhouette gloaming of pallid bust, and bird of mourning:
And the heart sighed deeper moarning. Afront that shadow on my chamber thoor. weird and direful, ominous

Shadow, athwart my chamber floor, And doleful croak of "Nevermore."

R ---

R -

Then death-like stillness reigned supreme;
 An awing solitude there seemed;
 A ghastly, norror-haunted scene;
 That never, never would give eer.
 Wy pulse was beating quick and wild,
 Like throbbing heart of frightened child.
 And on my pallid brow, the while
 Were beads of watery gore.
 The Raven eyed my features sharp
 With beads of watery gore,
 Then weirdly uttered. "Nevermore."

Then, methought, the air grew denser.

Perfumed from an unseen censer swung by Seraphim, whose footfalls

Tinkled on the tufted floor.
"Wretch," I cried, "thy God hath lent thee.

By these augels he hath sent thee

Respite—respite and nepenthe,
From thy memories of Lenore!
Quall, oh quall this kind nepenthe,
And forget this lost Lenore!"
Quoth the Raven, "Nevermore,"

"That word," said 1. "is fraught with

"That word, said it. is meaning, meaning,
Profound beyond its simple seeming,—A very falisman, perhaps,
Of deep, prophetic lore,
But whilst the Raven seems a friend,
His "Nevermore doth have a trend Toward prophecy of dark portend,
Revealed through mystic lore.
Purpove him tell my destiny

l'll have him tell my-destiny

By his quaint and mythic lore, Brought from the classic yore,

If bird or beast e'er privilege found Of gaining knowledge beyond the bound

Of gaining knowledge beyond the bound Of common things, the Raven Did, on Jordan's sacred shore; For there, we're told, the Ravens fed The seer, Elijah, wanting bred, "Twere natural he should touch each head With mand of his constant laws.

With wand of his prophetic lore. It seemeth natural he would Verse them in prophetic lore, As bird—had ne'er been versed before,

"Prophet!" said 1, "thing of evil!-

Prophet: said I, "thing of evil;—
Prophet still, if bird or devil!—
Whether Tempter sent, or whether
Temptest tossed thee here ashore,
Desolate, yet all undaunted,
On this desert land enchanted—
On this desert land enchanted—

We lay sweet unction to the soul; Tis human like when we are told By prophecy of something great And good for us in store;

But when answer to our query Takes a form that's dark and dreary,

Because prophetic, it just queerly Tells, or means there's good in store.

On this desert and enchanted—
On this home by Horror haunted—
Tell me truly, I implore—
Is there—is there balm in Gilead?
Tell me—fell me, I implore!"
Quoth the Raven, "Nevermore."

 "Prophit!" said 1, "thing of evil,-Prophit still, if bird or devil!
 By that heaven that bends above us, By that God we both adore,

We take the answer by contraries,
And claim it means there's good in store;
Yet not content we query more.

Tell this soul with sorrow laden,

If, within the distant Aidenn,
If, within the distant Aidenn,
It shall clasp a sainted maiden,
Whom the angels name Lenore—
Clasp a rare and radiant maiden,
Whom the angels name Lenore?"
Quoth the Raven, "Nevermore."

"Be that word our sign of parting,
Bird or fiend, I shrieked, upstarting;
"Get the back into the tempest
And the night's Plutonian shore!
Leave no black plume as a token
Of that lie thy soul hath spoken!
Leave my loneliness unbroken!
Quit the bust above my door!
Take thy beak from out my heart and Tade thy form from off my door!"
Quoth the Raven, "Nevermore."

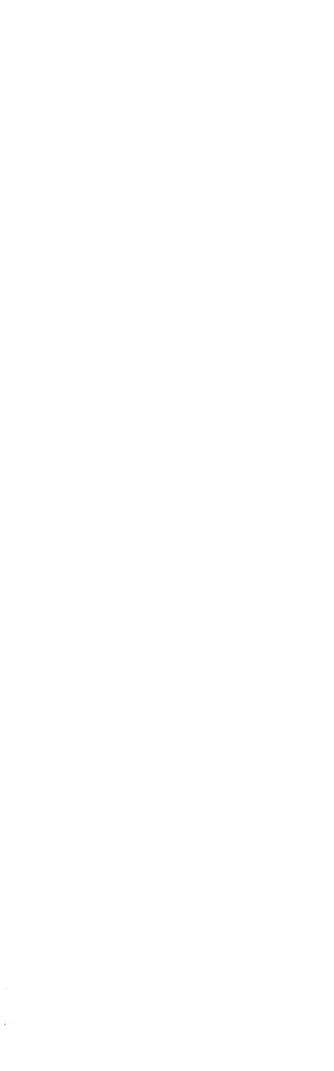

Quoth the Raven, "Nevermore."

P— And the Raven, never diting
Still is sitting, still is sitting
On the pallid bust of Pallas,
Just above my chamber door;
And his eyes have all the seeming
Of a demon's that is dreaming,
And the lamp-light o'er him streaming,
Throws his shadow on the floor;
And my soul from out that shadow,
That lies floating on the floor,
Shall be lifted—nevermore!

R— "Nevermore":—Despairs refrain.—
There's good in store,"—Hope cries amian
"And the soul from out that shadow
Shall to brighter realms soar."
Lite's a drama fraught with meaning,
Whose dark shadows, to our seeming,
May be gems of brightest gleaming
Upon some sunnier shore,
And ray the brow and soul with
Jewels, upon some sunnier shore,

Whose glory fadeth-nevemore.

FIBEYSA SIMOTNE DOLUZ SUOZ

